

Abstract of the Disclosure

A flash memory device and system include a boot block voltage pump for providing a word line voltage to the boot block of the flash memory. At least one additional voltage pump is provided to supply a word line voltage to the remaining 5 memory blocks. The memory device can be operated according to a specification where data stored in the boot block can be read as valid data before data stored in other memory blocks can be validly read upon memory activation.

10